

Netflix Data Analytics: Solving 15 Business Problems Using SQL

Based on an analysis of the `netflix_titles.csv` dataset, here is a comprehensive insights summary corresponding to the database structure and queries provided:

Overview & Content Breakdown

- Total Catalog Size: The dataset contains a total of 8,807 titles.
- Content Type Distribution:
 - Movies: 6,131 titles (~69.6%)
 - TV Shows: 2,676 titles (~30.4%)
 - Insight: Netflix's library is heavily weighted toward Movies, outnumbering TV Shows more than 2 to 1.

Top Insights & Findings

1. Most Common Audience Ratings

The most frequent rating for both formats is TV-MA (Mature Audience), signaling that a significant portion of Netflix's library targets adult audiences.

- Movies: TV-MA (2,062 titles)
- TV Shows: TV-MA (1,145 titles)

2. Top 5 Countries Producing Content

When breaking down multi-country productions individually, the top geographic contributors to the library are:

1. United States: 3,689 titles
2. India: 1,046 titles
3. United Kingdom: 804 titles
4. Canada: 445 titles
5. France: 393 titles

3. Data Completeness & Missing Fields

- Missing Directors: There are 2,634 entries that do not have a director listed. This is highly common for TV Shows where individual episodes have different directors, rather than the entire series.

4. Description Content Safety Analysis

Following your logic classifying mature/intense themes based on the presence of words like "kill" or "violence" in the synopsis:

- Mature/Violent Themes: 342 titles
- General/Family Content: 8,465 titles

Key Takeaways

- The Indian Market: India represents Netflix's second-largest content producer in this dataset, driven substantially by a massive volume of Bollywood and regional Indian cinema.
- Maturing Library: The dominance of the TV-MA rating highlights Netflix's strategic pivot toward prestige, adult-oriented programming (like Squid Game, Stranger Things, or mature films) over traditional family network ratings.